Frank Lenk, Director of the Office of Economic Development at Mid-America Regional Council, met with Commissioners to deliver a thorough presentation on the metro area's economy. Frank leads the Research Services department, which monitors the economic, demographic and social trends affecting the region, and is responsible for collecting, maintaining, and analyzing real-time economic data to identify areas of growth and potential vulnerabilities in metro regions. During his presentation, Frank outlined several factors influencing the Kansas City economy, using economic performance data to highlight significant shifts over time. One key point he expanded on was the region's vulnerability to potential federal layoffs, noting that the federal government has a larger presence in Kansas City than in most other metropolitan areas. The KC economy has a higher concentration of federal workers than most metro areas, noting where employment is 35% larger than average, ranking 8th among the 50 largest metros. However, a larger presence means layoffs will have a larger impact. Job losses in the federal sector can lead to declines in economic output, population, and labor force participation. Frank also noted that federal spending has an even greater impact than federal employment alone, with federal funds supporting both individuals and key sectors. This contributes to both regional and economic growth and plays a crucial role in disaster recovery and resilience. He concluded his presentation by expressing his belief that through regional collaboration and working together, Kansas City can become a place where opportunities grow for everyone who lives and works here.

Open comments:

- Donnie Fowler with Fowler Bus Company in Richmond, expressed concerns regarding the condition of several roads – Rabbit Farm Road, W 108th Street, and Stewart Road. The rough road conditions have caused issues for their buses, including parts of the bus coming loose or falling off during transit. Commissioner Hockemeier will follow up with Tim from Road & Bridge to address these issues.

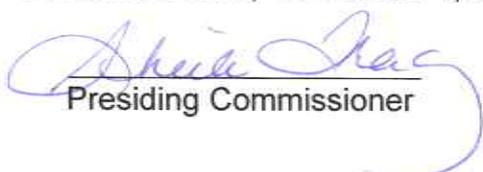

Charles Day, Mayor of Henrietta, and Margie Long, Financial Officer for the City of Henrietta, met with Commissioners to address concerns regarding the deteriorating condition of W 84th Street. The road is a safety concern for residents, with potholes reported to be as deep as six inches. The discussion on who is responsible for maintaining and fixing the road was also had, with parts potentially falling under Henrietta Special Road District, Richmond Special Road District, and the County. Jack Marant from Richmond Special had also attended to speak on the issues. It was noted that state maintenance ends at the highway off-ramp, and from there, the County is supposed to take over maintenance. Since different portions of the road are maintained by different departments, they have explored possible ways that everyone could work together on the repairs and look into fixing the damaged concrete. The first step that was discussed was obtaining cost estimates and collaborating among everyone to find the best solution for repairing the road. Commissioners will speak with Tim from Road & Bridge to identify possible repair options for the potholes. Additionally, there were also concerns regarding the Henrietta overpass, where large chunks of concrete have been falling off. Great River Engineering will be sharing their formal report on the Henretta overpass at the upcoming Commission meeting on Wednesday, October 1, 2025.

Kenneth O'Dell, Scott Fifer, along with other members from Hardin Special Road District met with Commissioners to express concerns regarding the smaller bridge on Buffalo Road. One of the main questions they needed clarification on was who was responsible for fixing or replacing the bridge - whether it falls under County Jurisdiction or Hardin Special Road District. While the County is not financially obligated to fund the repair, as the bridge does fall under the responsibility of Hardin Special, the Commissioners are willing to work together on repairing it. Their primary concern is that the bridge is in urgent need of repair, as it is a vital access point for farmers and could be critical in emergency situations. One proposed solution discussed among everyone was the possibility of installing a tube to replace the bridge and make sure it would be safe to travel on. A floodplain permit would need to be in place prior to starting any repairs. The Commissioners plan to contact MoDot to inquire about the process for obtaining a floodplain permit, to ensure that the project will stay in compliance with all regulations.
